ONCOLOGY CLINICAL TEAM LEADER AND DIVISION DIRECTOR
REVIEW OF SUPPLEMENTAL NDA

NDA 20541/S-006

APPLICANT AstraZeneca

DRUG Arimidex

DATE RECEIVED BY FDA November 1, 1999

PROPOSED INDICATION "for the first-line treatment of post menopausal women with advanced breast cancer."

BACKGROUND

Arimidex is currently approved for "treatment of advanced breast cancer in postmenopausal women with disease progression following tamoxifen. Patients with ER-negative disease and patients who did not respond to previous tamoxifen therapy rarely respond to Arimidex."

The FDA requirement for approval of a new hormonal drug for initial treatment of postmenopausal women with advanced metastatic breast cancer is non-inferiority or superiority to tamoxifen for tumor response rate in randomized controlled trials comparing the new hormonal drug to tamoxifen. This is conditional that the new hormonal drug is not worse than tamoxifen for time to tumor progression (TTP) or survival. Statistical non-inferiority for TTP and survival need not be shown, but the new hormonal drug and tamoxifen must at least be similar. Survival data will usually be immature at the time of approval. A Phase 4 commitment to submit follow-up survival data is required.

Non-inferiority of the new hormonal agent to tamoxifen for TTP or survival would not be adequate for approval because tamoxifen has never been shown to have a favorable effect on TTP or survival in this patient population. Of course better survival for the new hormonal drug would be adequate for approval. Better TTP for the new hormonal drug would also be adequate for approval provided survival is similar.

In contrast to TTP or survival, demonstrating non-inferiority of tumor response rate does not require use of data from other trials to estimate the effect of tamoxifen on tumor response rate. The assumption is that all of the tumor response rate is due to the tamoxifen. In reality a tumor response rate as high as 5% may occur without any treatment, but the FDA does not consider this in its assessment of tumor response rate non-inferiority.

The FDA does not have a general policy on how much of the tamoxifen response rate may be lost with the new hormonal drug and still consider it non-inferior to tamoxifen. This is determined on a case by case basis.

CLINICAL TRIALS

The Applicant has submitted results of two double blind randomized controlled trials comparing Arimidex and tamoxifen for initial treatment of post menopausal women with hormone receptor positive or hormone receptor unknown locally advanced or metastatic breast cancer. The two studies have a total of 353 and 668 patients, respectively.

Arimidex and tamoxifen tumor response rates are statistically non-inferior in both studies. Arimidex TTP is statistically superior to tamoxifen in one study and similar in the other study. Survival data for Arimidex and tamoxifen is similar in both trials, but is immature with about 62% of patients censored. A Phase 4 commitment to submit updated survival data will be necessary.

There were no clear differences in toxicity between Arimidex and tamoxifen. Because Arimidex causes low estrogen levels there is concern that Arimidex may have more adverse effects than tamoxifen on bone and heart disease. In the two randomized trials with safety data on 1017 total patients there was no higher incidence of fractures or myocardial infarctions on Arimidex than tamoxifen. Indeed Arimidex tended to have fewer patients with thromboembolic disease, but not enough to support a specific claim. Arimidex would not be expected to increase the incidence of endometrial cancer as tamoxifen does. But the duration of exposure and follow-up in these trials is too short to assess this.
